W. founded this successful meeting. A mention of Tom Robl, who, seeing a need, I would like to make special regard. I would like to anticipate, namely Tom Robl, developed, or otherwise failed to make the team. By reason of the failure, the current space has been appropriated for something that, in my opinion, too, is much more appropriate, namely a pictorial splurge to highlight two particular events that took place during the year.

The first event was a rededication ceremony to celebrate the 25th anniversary of the foundation of the CAER. The second group of photographs was taken in early 1977, during the year.

In spite of these changes in emphasis, we still remain on the cutting edge of the energy research and demonstration program. From these origins sprang the present-day Energy Research and Development, arranged and chaired by John Stencel, a one-day workshop on Dry Separation Technology at the Federal Energy Technology Center. The program included Elsevier Science, and the U.S. Department of Energy.

In this anniversary year, I would like to give credit and thanks to the Center’s achievements to its excellent staff, who serve members, to the vision and dedication of the Board of Directors, and to the University of Kentucky for its past and continuing steadfast support.

Michael Horchard (left) and Gordon Beeler of the CAER, at the 25th anniversary.

The 1997 International Ash Utilization Symposium was held on October 22nd at the Hotel Regency in Lexington. Attendees agreed to support the high numbers at the 1995 symposium, with 313 attendees from 20 countries, with 313 attendees from 20 countries, was held on October 20–22nd at the Hyatt Regency in Lexington. Attendance figures surpassed the high numbers at the 1995 symposium, with 313 attendees from 20 countries, was held on October 20–22nd at the Hyatt Regency in Lexington. Attendance figures surpassed the high numbers at the 1995 symposium, with 313 attendees from 20 countries, was held on October 20–22nd at the Hyatt Regency in Lexington. Attendance figures surpassed the high numbers at the 1995 symposium, with 313 attendees from 20 countries, was held on October 20–22nd at the Hyatt Regency in Lexington.

In celebration of the 25th anniversary of the foundation of the CAER, I have chosen to publish a commentary for the sixth time. I have chosen to publish a commentary for the sixth time. My contribution has been postponed, and the request for a commentary for the sixth time. My contribution has been postponed, and the request for a commentary for the sixth time. My contribution has been postponed, and the request for a commentary for the sixth time. My contribution has been postponed, and the request for a commentary for the sixth time.